

Information Session for Participation in a Research Project:

Creating justice-oriented pedagogies with Black early childhood educators

Please note that participation in this information session is voluntary

We are inviting all early childhood educators who self-identify as Black to participate in a pilot project that focuses on Black early childhood educators' thoughts and experiences with justice-oriented curriculum and anti-Black racism in early childhood education. If you choose to participate in this research, you will be consenting to participate in 3 two-hour focus group sessions to take place in a sequence of one per month (October 2021, November 2021, January 2022).

Participation in the three focus group sessions will be on a password protected online platform.

If you self-identify as a Black early childhood educator and would like to participate in this study and are interested in finding out more detailed information about the project and participant consent, please contact Dr. Fikile Nxumalo, Principal Investigator, via email, at f.nxumalo@utoronto.ca. It is important to note that participation in the information session is voluntary and does not indicate consent to participate.

A follow up email detailing the date, time, and link to the information session will only be sent out to those who have expressed interest by emailing Dr. Nxumalo directly.

Thank you,
Dr. Fikile Nxumalo (Principal Investigator)
Assistant Professor, Ontario Institute for Studies in Education (OISE)
University of Toronto
f.nxumalo@utoronto.ca or 1-416-978-6216

Dr. Veronica Pacini-Ketchabaw (Co-Investigator)
Professor, Western University
vpacinik@uwo.ca or 519-661-2111 extension 80375